This article originating from People's Daily on 14th, June, was posted with the name that we should insist our unbridgeable principle.

There is always a basic principle worthy of our attention that the economic development can never depend on the premise of sacrificing people's lives. It is also a very realistic motto concluded from a series of disastrous accidents. We need strictly put this rule into practice and keep all the security production activities into a perfect order.

Anyway, this principle is the basic promise of protecting citizens' lives and financial properties. Obeying this rule, the base of the social economic development means the outstanding respect towards both life and residents. As you know, people's life is the first thing for the whole society. Thus, PRC should completely realize the objective of serving the people, in order to indeed strive for the China's dream with insisting on the scientific development. At the same time, we also need to acknowledge that there are still some demerits or difficulties on the way to development as well as revolution. We have the responsibility to create happiness for the public without damaging the people's lives.

Moreover, it's also necessary to adhere to that people-oriented, safety first. However, the best political achievements and economy can never make up the loss of life and financial properties in the occasional accidents. We should put the life safety into the first position before executing any strategies, polices, orders or measures. Any kind of development is supposed to benefit the common people, which can bear no excuse in the process of safety production. Actually, the safety production concerns multiple factors, people's lives and financial properties, economic development, social stability, as well as the image of PRC and Chinese government. Therefore, it can be said that it's never excessive to emphasize the vital importance of safety production.

Also, this principle also signs a series of responsibilities. It's strongly believed that the financial security belongs to the unshakable responsibility of PRC and Chinese government. Thus, government leaders at all levels should focus on their loyal working spirit, to take more measures in the precaution and defend aspect. To be specific, they need to investigate the detailed conditions in the accident sites to acknowledge the complete hidden danger elements. Then, all effective measures and strict surveillance should be taken to keep safety production under control. Therefore, the potential risks and dangerous factors could be put removed in the primary stage by firm thought, strict system as well as advanced technology.

Above all, this principle should be absolutely obeyed to prevent any sacrifices of life. Only the safety production is applied into the whole economic development situation can largely promote the economic transformation and upgrading. Then, China's dream will come true quickly and people will attain a more and more wonderful living environment.
